Memorial Award

Marty Carr

Marty Carr's was prominent in both the educational psychology and mathematics education research communities:

President and Fellow of Division 15 as well as president of the Women in Mathematics Education organization. Dr. Marty Carr's passion for closing the mathematics achievement gap for students not only provided the field with critical information about how instruction can be improved, but it also helped lay the foundation for future researchers in the field.

President's Report

- Presidential Theme: Evidence-based change through:
  - Psychology
  - Policy
  - Professional Learning
  - Participatory Practice

Important points

- We are a research-based division.
- We want our research to be used by practitioners and policy makers. For example, we need to counter myths.
- Also, our research agendas should be informed by the needs, perspectives, constraints and affordances of stakeholders.

Policy & Practice Committee

- Ad hoc committee
  - Co-chaired by Sharon Nichols and Nancy Perry
  - Survey of member expertise
- Will invite members to assist with preparation of policy and practice briefs.
  - What does the evidence say about various options.
  - Involve other professional organizations in the preparation and dissemination/co-semination.

Some topics

- School climate
- Social emotional learning
- Standardized testing

D15 Professional Learning and Applied Contributions Initiative

Members can be recognized in our PT blog, newsletter, and social media channels.

One Tip Series

Tips by Senior Scholars

ONE TIP PRESENTED BY APA DIVISION 15 MARCH 2018 EDITION

DR. ANITA WOOLFOLK HOY

I joined the faculty of Rutgers University as an assistant professor when I was 26 years old. The following summer, my daughter was born. When she was under 2 and I was still untenured, I signed a contract to do an educational psychology textbook. Beside the words “naïve” and “optimistic” in the dictionary should be my picture. I do not recommend caring for an infant, teaching classes, doing your research, and writing a text, all while an untenured faculty—but I survived and I learned not to waste a minute of writing.

I also practiced a few other writing tips you may have read:

- Don't push to the end of a project before you stop for the day. If you have to mobilize for a whole new section or project the next day, you may procrastinate. Instead, stop with something to complete—you will get right back into writing faster the next day if you can pick up where you left off. Then if you finish and have time, you will have the energy to start on a new task, and stop that one before you are done so the next day it is easy to pick up again, and on, and on.
- Even if you only have a little time, think of a small task that moves you forward—poke holes in the project. You can grade papers anywhere these days.
- Set interim deadlines for parts of a writing task and write them on your calendar. No matter what, always, always write at least one page a day.
- Reward yourself with answering email when you finish a chunk of writing.

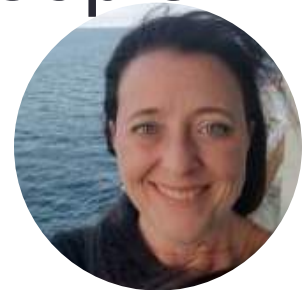

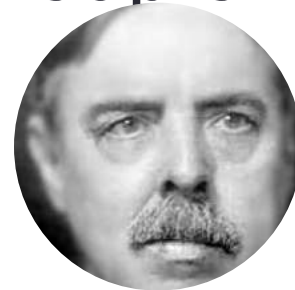

The notion of waiting to write until I had “time” had to be dispelled. I...

MEMBERSHIP BUSINESS

Additional Investment Portfolio Objective

“The basic objective of Division 15 will be maintaining at least 3 years of operating expenses.”

- APA requires two years.
- Provides an additional cushion for discretionary spending, unexpected expenses, and, if there are sufficient funds, taking more risks with our investment portfolio.

Membership

- Current projections have us on pace for ~1,900 members at year's end. This remains a relatively flat number compared to 2017.
- Serena Shim's Membership Committee has performed diligent, personalized outreach each year to introduce enrollment options and membership benefits to relevant university programs around the country.
- Wade George has pursued each year's non-renewals with multiple rounds of reminders. APA's Division Services office also sends paper mail reminders in ~February to all lapsed members.
- Our new Grad Student Ambassadors have also promoted membership among their peers at mentors.
